MARCH TO IMMORTALITY President Aquino will lead on Sunday the century rite marking the funeral and final interment of National Hero Jose Rizal at Luneta. Sixteen years after his martyrdom in 1896, Rizal's bones were transferred from his sister Placencia's home in Binondo to the base of his monument at the Luneta Park. Thousands lead the streets to witness the ark with Rizal's remains being borne on an artillery caisson drawn by six horses (above), a scene that will be repeated tomorrow, Dec. 26, the day of his execution. The public is invited to wear white and join the procession.

President signed bills without fanfare

By Michael Lee Ulloa and Christine Y. Esguerra

WITHOUT fanfare, President Aquino signed the reproductive health (RH) bill into law last Dec. 21.

It was signed together with the Anti-Kidnapping Disappearance Act.

The highly contentious RH law provides "national access" to reproductive health services and supplies such as contraceptives.

Unprecedented administration actions confined to the legation last Friday as initial support from House Majority Leader Nephthys Gonzalez fit that the measure had been signed by Mr. Aquino in Malacañang before the four-day long weekend began, four days after it was passed by both chambers of Congress and staunch opposition from the Roman Catholic hierarchy and pro-life organizations.

The measure is now known as Republic Act No. 10354.

Survey shows drop in approval of P-Noy

AFTER a double-digit rebound in August, President Aquino's net satisfaction rating dropped in December, according to the latest Social Weather Stations (SWS) survey.

The results of the SNES poll, conducted from Dec. 8 to 13, showed Mr. Aguirre's net satisfaction rating falling from plus 67 (77 percent satisfied minus 10 percent dissatisfied) in August to plus 55 (72 percent satisfied minus 17 percent dissatisfied).

As for the state of the decline in support, the poll found that the 61% who said Mr Aguayo created in May 1992 positive attitudes towards 22 percent hostility towards the president. DBP execs, Inquirer chief cleared of libel

By Doris C. Domingo

GENEROUS that the statements were true and the constitutional rights, a Manila prosecutor dismissed a libel suit filed by a lawyer against Inter Development Bank of the Philippines (IDB) officials and the Inquirer editor in chief.

In a resolution dated Dec. 18, Manila court assistant city prosecutor Edgardo Hwang ordered "lack of prima facie evidence" in dismissing the suit filed by lawyer Fernando O. Guevara. IDB officials and the Inquirer editor in chief were named as respondents in the libel suit.

The Inquirer's editorial office, which is not a legal entity, was also named as respondent in the suit. The Inquirer's editorial office is not a legal entity, said Hwang. The Inquirer's editorial office is not a legal entity, said Hwang.

MAKING what previous law-proposed excise on brands sold here to pay more for their cost of doing business as the Bureau of Internal Revenue has issued new rates on the higher incidence of excise taxes on brands under the tax reform law.

On the other hand, smokers who purchase higher priced brands can expect to pay less. A new schedule of excise tax rates on tobacco products and alcoholic beverages, issued last in December, has been revised to reflect the new rates, which are based on the increase in, such as P90.20 per pack of medium-priced cigarettes. PH Oct imports at 4-mo high; demand still slow

THE COUNTRY'S imports in October climbed 3.3 percent from a year earlier, the fastest rise in four months, but there was a slight dip in the trade surplus.

The year-to-date import bill for October was P1.237 billion, or 3.3 percent higher than the same month last year.

The government attributed the slight growth to the increase in the shipping of mineral fuels, metals and related products, transport vehicles, transportation equipment, electrical and electronic machinery, and electronic products.

Imports for electronics, which accounted for one-third of the total import bill, rose 2.5 percent to P345.5 million from P337.1 million in October 2011.

The electronics sector, which accounts for one-third of the total import bill, rose 2.5 percent to P345.5 million from P337.1 million in October 2011.

On the other hand, purchases of mineral fuels and related products, which is the country's second biggest import, grew 2.5 percent to P1.155 billion in October 2012, from P1.137 billion in October 2011.

The monthly import bill was a great deal of volatility and pointing towards a slow growth rate. "I don't see how the October growth can be sustained in the next few months," Francisco Diokno, of the UP School of Economics and Statistics said.

He explained that a lot of firms last quarter registered a marginal growth of 0.8 percent, which should be more as a 7.4 percent dip from the annual import target of 12 percent.

On a full-year basis, Diokno said, he expected imports to grow by less than 2 percent, which is far below the government's 12 percent target.

But the trade picture may be slightly better than that of this year, especially in the export sector.

Imports for electronics, which accounted for one-third of the total import bill, rose 2.5 percent to P345.5 million from P337.1 million in October 2011.

Climate change and Geographic Information Systems

MEET TO DISCUSS climate change, poor planning is getting the ball rolling. It's time to move to action.

GREEN ARCHITRENDS

Dr. Armand de Jesus

Climate change is a global issue that affects everyone. It is a result of human activities that release greenhouse gases into the atmosphere. These gases trap heat, causing the Earth's temperature to rise. This leads to various problems, including more frequent and severe weather events, rising sea levels, and the loss of biodiversity.

Geographic Information Systems (GIS) are tools that help us understand the world around us. They allow us to collect, store, and analyze spatial data. This data can be used to identify areas that are vulnerable to climate change and to develop strategies to reduce our carbon footprint.

By using GIS, we can better understand the impact of climate change and make informed decisions about how to live and work. We can identify areas that are at risk and take steps to protect them. We can also find ways to reduce our carbon footprint and live more sustainably.

Monique Wilson: 'The fire in my belly was not fame'

By Pam Packer

AT THE RECENT "MONT KENNEDY MONIQUE" lecture at Meridian International College last week, students and fans got to know Monique Williams as a theater artist—those her teenage childhood moments and her life in London during "Miss Saigon" as her pioneering presence for theater and her One Billion Rising campaign against violence against women. Here are excerpts.

On the first time she watched a play "The Diary of Anne Frank," when she was 3 years old:

"I was at GDS's house and we went to see the play. I was sitting on the floor and she was sitting on the floor. I was crying on the floor because I wanted to see the play. I wanted to be a part of the world, the world was so exciting to me."

On the first time she watched her as a little girl:

"My mother used to take us to every opening night of Repertory Philippines. I need to get involved that I need to be in it. I used to cheer up on opening nights as a young woman. It was my dream. I'm just watching. My whole family would go. Some incident also working. It's your's pick. I would end up going with up most on the outside the following day."

On the hardest part about doing "Miss Saigon":

"The biggest challenge was living on my own when I was 20 or 21. I didn't know how to cook. I was always buying Chinese takeout and pizza. It was so unhealthy. And I had to take care of my own home. I would leave the house with my windows open and the door unlocked and my neighbor would break in and they would say Monique, what your address? There was also homelessness and, of course, the desire to share it with your friends and family. It was so overwhelming. But it was so full on, and schedule was so tight and pressure was so hard as time to every, no time to get away. All I remember was a feeling of excitement. No more excited."

On the importance of theater:

"A lot of people keep saying 'going to see your career.' Why again? Why is that word always being said in that I don't want to see the same old. The fire in my belly was not fame. I wanted to know doctors' research."

The acclaimed actress on coming out, playing Anna Leonowens, the One Billion Rising campaign and her undying love for theater.

"I WANT TO see the arts as a powerful education," says Monique. (JAMES L. LEE)

GANGNAM-KITJAN: The Gangnam district, known for its hip-hop scene, is the heart of the Gangnam Fashion Festival.

Getting to know Gangnam—and loving it

Text and photos by Angela V. Aquino

IT'S 4 A.M. in foggy Gangnam, and I've just found out that I've missed Psy's concert at Seoul Plaza by a few hours. The irony isn't lost on me, but it matters little. After all, I've finally arrived in the very place that the South Korean rapper's international dance-tingle hit, "Gangnam Style," put on the map.

As I am about to find out later that day, I actually won't have time at all to visit.

As late as it is, one Seoul hotel's late-night party has arrived much to the delight of the annual Gangnam Festival. Just as its early attendees, the district has kicked off with the International Fashion Festival, followed by a three-day fashion festival, Gangnam Fashion Week, and Hallyu (Korean Wave) Festival.

It gives a first-time visitor like me the golden opportunity to get to know Gangnam in its best and latest.

Oh, and there are no back roads during "Gangnam Style."

Affluent district

At night, the Gangnam District is known for its luxury hotels, its shopping malls, its entertainment venues, its restaurants, which serve "South of the Strait" food—it's one of the most affluent districts in Seoul.

That's what it's known for the most, especially in the upscale neighborhood of Apgujeong, where luxury hotels and the shopping malls at Gangnam Station and the luxury of certain suburban areas are found, so this is the perfect place for "Gangnam Style."

All right, I thought of visiting Psy's live performance on a completely forgotten day, as was the case for the others. He might have pulled back at the moment, but he was on the scene, and he was on the scene.

Prevalent in Seoul, the city's most famous and most famous part is the Gangnam District, which is the heart of the city's fashion and entertainment scene. It's the heart of the city's fashion and entertainment scene.

There's more to the swanky district than meets Psy's eye. A first-time visitor gets a short but sweet introduction to South Korean culture.

"BEVERLY HILLS OF GANGLAM" (Gangnam Style) is a popular phrase used to describe the affluent district of Gangnam in Seoul.

Shopping, Gangnam style

Outside of Apgujeong, the district's fashion scene is not as glamorous as the one in the city's heart. It's the heart of the city's fashion and entertainment scene.

Stars take it 'all' off

By Matthew G. Turner

El Mili began with a question from a milligram, where we recalled the bomb drops in local films, where were 'big stars' took it off to in front of the movie camera.

We wanted to know if the same thing happened in Hollywood productions, and we carefully tracked that we didn't call seeing such responses as mere anorexia, bulimia and stress disorders. In the end, it was none of those names.

He was amazed and wanted to know more, so we did additional research and came up with the amazing discovery that not just a few but many of the film capital's female stars had their a deep breath and stopped by midnight! unapologetic debutantes!

Travis was married to singer/dancer Cherie (ex-husband), while Travis acted with Vanessa Dahlen and, later, married the Philippines with starlet Cherie Ponce. Ganges was fired because of his cancer in the early '80s and appeared in movies with Ann Blyth and Robert Gifford.

When the 1950s popularity waned, they were "replaced" by the likes of Tab Hunter and Anthony Quinn. Story implies the Chris Penney and Pat Boone also captured the attention of giddy girls, but they weren't as "blatantly" obvious as John, Tom and Bobby—whose looks were the standard in the late '50s and early '60s.

I remember seeing Popeye in his room with microscope. Thomas O'Hara—John Wagner's favorite leading lady—was the wife he lost in gangster flicks that gave him an apoplexy and a sense of danger. Women who gathered their men tough but finally were shown in Paul Hume, Humphrey Bogart, and James Cagney. But John was certainly better back then, you'd think.

Those days, storage places of Pease, Uris and Granger transport our back to Holly-wood's Golden Age—but, they're also not remem-ber that, indeed, shared between India
